

Name: Abiodun Atoloye, PhD

Title: Assistant Professor in the Nutrition, Dietetics, and Food Sciences Department

Expertise: Food safety, Food Security, Nutrition, and Dietetics

Institution: Utah State University

Contact: abiodun.atoloye@usu.edu

Bio: Dr. Abiodun Atoloye is an Assistant Professor in the Nutrition, Dietetics, and Food Sciences Department at Utah State University. Her research focuses on inequities in food access and community food systems. She seeks to understand barriers that low-resource families, refugees, and immigrants face in accessing healthy, affordable, safe, nutritious, and culturally acceptable food. Her projects span nutrition, health, environment, and food systems, emphasizing the intersection of people, policy, and global contexts. She works to develop practical approaches that engage diverse stakeholders, including residents, to improve food access and health outcomes for low-resource and underserved populations.